Witness Statement (MG11 Format — Intelligence Copy)

I, Margaret Anne Fletcher, of 5 Osmond Drive, Wells, Somerset, state the following. I have lived at my current address for approximately fourteen years, having moved here with my late husband shortly after he retired from his work at the printing factory in Shepton Mallet.

I am familiar with the general area and most of the residents along Osmond Drive, including those residing at number 3, which is directly adjacent to my property on the eastern side. The events I describe occurred during the summer of 2014, and although I cannot recall the exact time immediately, I later determined from checking my kitchen clock and the television schedule that it would have been between approximately 21:15 and 21:45 hours.

On the evening in question, I had been watching television in my sitting room, specifically a programme about coastal railways, and had just finished making a cup of tea. I remember this distinctly because I had used one of the floral mugs given to me by my daughter some years prior, and I had also been sorting through a stack of unopened letters on the small wooden side table near the window. While seated, I became aware of movement outside, initially thinking it may have been a fox or perhaps one of the neighbourhood cats, as they frequently pass through the gardens at night. However, upon closer inspection through the net curtain, I observed what I believed to be a male individual standing near the rear boundary of number 3 Osmond Drive.

This individual appeared to be of average height and build, wearing what I would describe as dark clothing, possibly a jacket and trousers, although I cannot be entirely certain due to the lighting conditions at the time. The street lighting does not fully illuminate the rear gardens, and the area was partially obscured by the shadow of the fence and nearby shrubbery. Nevertheless, I distinctly recall that the individual remained stationary for several moments, appearing to look toward the rear of the property.

I also recall hearing a vehicle earlier that evening, although I did not initially consider it relevant. It had been parked briefly along the street, and I later saw it depart. At the time, I did not take note of the registration number, but I remember thinking that it was unusual for a vehicle to stop without any obvious purpose. It is possible, although I cannot confirm, that this vehicle may have been connected to the individual I observed.

I continued to observe the area intermittently for several minutes, during which time the individual appeared to move closer to the rear door of the property. I then briefly left the window to retrieve my glasses from the kitchen, as my eyesight is not as strong as it once was. When I returned, I could no longer see the individual. I did not hear any obvious sounds of forced entry, but I was aware of a general sense of unusual activity.

At the time, I did not contact the police, as I was uncertain whether what I had observed was suspicious or simply someone visiting the property. It was only later, when I learned of the reported burglary, that I realised the possible significance of what I had seen. I wish to state that while I cannot positively identify the individual, I believe that my observations may be relevant to the investigation.

In addition to the above, I recall that earlier that day I had been gardening and had noticed unfamiliar tyre tracks near the curb, although

I cannot say with certainty whether they were related. I also remember that the weather had been mild, with clear skies and no rain, and that visibility was generally good. These details may or may not be relevant, but I include them for completeness.

This statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief, and I make it knowing that it may be used for intelligence and investigative purposes.
